Brian Dodds

I am a Health Practitioner, medical researcher and the author of the book FULL REGENERATION: The Ultimate Health Journey.

doddsbr@quik.co.nz

www.fullregeneration.com

In 1978 I contracted hepatitis and recovered successfully. Five years later after receiving a hepatitis B vaccination I became very sick with a virus that was later identified as HTLV-1. It took me ten years to recover. During that period I devoted all my time and energy to research extensively the protocols of vaccination, the structure of HTLV - 1, the AIDS virus, connections between vaccines and viral infections, and most importantly what methods can overcome these infections.

The fact that I am fit and well today at 60 years old is a testimony of the research and the protocols I developed.

Conventional Treatment of disease

It is my opinion is that the conventional medical system`s approach is to "kill the bug" and at the same time manipulate individual processes and functions within the body to alleviate symptoms. I believe this approach neglects the harmonic balance of the body as a whole. In terms of AIDS, the various drug approaches do in fact prolong the life of the clients, but the side-effects over time finally compromise the immune system to a point where full recovery is extremely rare.

In my practice in New Zealand, I have used my methods with success on many clients suffering from all types of conditions. However I have never had an AIDS client. The main difficulty is the fact that all AIDS cases in New Zealand are already closely tied with the drug based medical protocols and any deviation from that system is suspect from the conventional medical system's point of view. The clients themselves are naturally afraid to stop taking the medicinal drugs and therefore the ability of any natural method is compromised to the where I no longer see any point in becoming involved.

Being curious as to whether my protocols could in fact be effective with AIDS, I have come to the Baan doi orphanage in Thailand to find out.

1- Project concept:

A multi-faceted alternative healing procedure for HIV-positive people

My conclusion after 25 years of research is that AIDS and most other viral diseases require a 4 pronged approach.

1. The viruses/pathogens responsible must be eliminated.
2. The immune system must be rebuilt with natural medicines and correct nutrition can be achieved through supplementation and healthy food.
3. The traumas and other compromises in the emotional body must be processed and integrated for the body energetics to return to normal.
4. In keeping with the present evolution of the planet, a concept of oneness and spiritual connectedness needs to be promoted for all people especially those suffering from AIDS. Understanding of that concept allows people to receive the positive collective energies of the planet and universe. This increase in energy can be a transformation tool to be applied to any physical condition with almost amazing results.

1.1 - Killing the bug: methods to fight the virus

1.1.1 MMS

In 1996 while on the gold mining expedition in the Amazon jungle, Jim Humble`s workers succumbed to malaria. Being far away from any conventional treatment, he tried to combat the infection using a product called `stabilized oxygen`, which was commonly available in Western healthy food shops at time. It worked well but no where near 100%.

On returning to the United States, he investigated thoroughly the chemical structure of `stabilized oxygen`, researched further and created a completely new version of the original medicine. Initial trials of this formula produced almost 100% success rates. Inspired by this, he went on to use his formula in Africa on Malaria and AIDS sufferers. His book, 'Breakthrough', documents quite unbelievable success rates when considering the very low cost of his medicine and the amount of money which is currently being spent on the so-called `fight against AIDS.` Through the difficulty of promoting his discoveries throughout the world, he came to the conclusion that the conventional system does not want such a low-cost medicine to be widely available because of the financial implications for the manufacturers of the present expensive AIDS drugs.

His website: <http://www.miraclemineal.org/>

Others: <http://mmsadvancedstudies.com/>

The science behind his formula is not totally unknown and is commonly used in more expensive water treatment plants around the world. It is also been approved by the New Zealand government for sterilising chicken pens in the egg production industry.

Brief scientific explanation

The most common form of water purification is chlorine. Chlorine in the form that is used is considered relatively safe to be used in swimming pools and water treatment plants. However, it is common knowledge that chlorine is carcinogenic and is not good for the body. Chlorine in the form of the chlorine dioxide is very different. It is a very powerful oxidising agent yet once completing its chemical reaction the result is sodium chloride and H₂O which is simply salt and water. There has been no evidence of any negative side effects while using this medicine. There are however cleansing reactions as the dead pathogens are the eliminated from the body.

1.1.2 Brain Re-patterning

A large part of my own recovery from the virus HTLV -1 was a technology known as frequency medicine. The following is an explanation. Sometimes at an opera show, when the singer`s voice hits a certain note, the wine glass in front of the patron shatters. The reason is that the resonant frequency of the wine glass has been duplicated by the singer`s voice. That resonance is enough to shatter the glass. Viruses, like everything have a specific frequency, therefore if the resonant frequency of the virus is transmitted to a body containing a virus, the virus will literally be blown apart. Machines using this technology were extensively developed in the 1930s by a man called Royal Rife. His discoveries were suppressed by the mainstream medical system and it is only in the last 20 years that alternative practitioners have rediscovered some of his techniques.

Over the last 6 years, I developed this technology further with the understanding that the brain is capable of creating any frequency if given the correct instructions. I have used this technology extensively with my own clients in New Zealand. The advantage, in my experience is that the cleansing reactions appear to be much less than those experienced while using the MMS medicine. The chapters 'Brain Re-patterning' and 'Frequency Medicine' my book 'FULL REGENERATION' elaborate deeper.

1.2 – Promoting life : strengthening the immune system

1.2.1 – Wheat grass juice

Wheat grass is an extremely powerful nutritional supplement. Not only because of the nutritional content, but because freshly juiced wheat grass contains the powerful life force of the living plant. It is not so commonly used in western countries because of the labour-intensive process required to give a client a glass of freshly made juice. In Asia, with wages being much less, the ability to supply sick people with this powerful drink is much less once the initial cost of a quality juicer is met.

1.2.2 – Kombucha

Chinese Kombucha is a very effective probiotic that has become very popular in the West in recent years. It is produced by a fermentation process using a vinegar like 'bug' suspended in various types of tea. Again the cost is relatively cheap in the Asian countries as most of the production is largely the time required to produce it.

1.2.3 – EM

E. M. stands for Effective Microorganisms. This formula of positive bacteria was developed in Japan and is mainly used to promote a quicker and higher quality composting system in the organic agricultural industry. In New Zealand, under the guidance of 'Bill Daley', a researcher working for Lincoln University in Christchurch, I ran clinical trials of this product for internal use. I found it to be a very effective probiotic and is capable of neutralising quite high levels of negative bacteria in the body.

1.3 – Holistic healing: emotional healing and promoting a stable healthy living environment.

In the area of emotional trauma and disharmony I believe there are several fundamental understandings. Every experience if not fully assimilated leaves a blockage in the body. Conversely every painful part of the body contains the story of why those constrictions exist. If one is guided through an integration process those blockages can be released and the body/mind regains balance. In my book 'FULL REGENERATION', this process is described fully.

Everybody understands that a stable environment is needed for health and happiness. Children in an orphanage, although lacking the love of the biological parents, can receive the love and compassion that is developed between each other and with a staff who are heart centred. In many western models of the nuclear family unit, a community feeling is often lacking. The old village system of the past assured this nurturing of all its members. Sadly this has been lost in the creation of large cities revolving around a profit/competition model. In Baan Doi I have personally witnessed and felt this community spirit of love and compassion.

Baan Doi - Home and Healing Center for Children - is an organization located near Mae Sai, the northernmost city in Thailand on the border of Myanmar.

Children, who have lost their parents to AIDS or are themselves infected with HIV find in Baan Doi a new home and caring family.

Children without Thai citizenship often have no access to the necessary knowledge about HIV/AIDS and can't afford the medical treatment. We make it possible for these children to have access to the required knowledge and medication.

Besides medical treatment our children have the possibility to go to school and the opportunity to grow up in a natural environment.

BACKGROUND

The Golden Triangle

The so-called "Golden Triangle" is the tri-country border region of Thailand, Myanmar - formerly called Burma, and Laos. The area is Thailand's northernmost province, Chiang Rai, and here, there are many migrants and hill tribe peoples living without Thai nationality. As non-citizens, they are excluded from the social system and are thereby forced to live in poverty.

Thai law provides for the education of all children, but the reality is that those who do not have Thai citizenship cannot afford the expenses of uniforms, books, lunch and other necessities of attending school; they are effectively barred from receiving an education.

The region is an area of major drug and sex trade fueled by both in-country and overseas demand. These scourges on the population all-too-often lead to broken families and death. Many children become orphaned or lose one parent, or they are without basic care. Chiang Rai province shows an increased rate of children orphaned by AIDS and infected with HIV.

HIV/AIDS¹

AIDS is the abbreviation for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome. The disease is caused by a virus known as the Human Immunodeficiency Virus, or HIV.

HIV can be transmitted through certain bodily fluids (such as semen and blood) by the sharing of needles and syringes (e.g. for drug injections) with someone who is infected, or through transfusions of infected blood or blood clotting factors. Babies born to HIV-infected women may become infected before or during birth or through breast-feeding after birth.²

In the last 25 years, HIV/AIDS has become a major health problem in Thailand. Statistics show that AIDS is the most common cause of death in the country. The sad corollary is that the number of HIV-positive children under 15 years of age has increased.

In 2004 there were 1,518 children estimated living with HIV/AIDS in Chiang Rai alone. Many more have already died, and at least 4,836 children have lost one or both of their parents to HIV/AIDS. For those children who have survived, life is very hard: many of them are orphans, and all face severe social stigma and discrimination.

Meanwhile, there are medicines and methods available which enable persons with HIV to live long and quite healthy lives with their families. This is possible only when these people have access to information about HIV/AIDS, to the most-recent medical therapies, and to knowledge about how to take care of themselves.

It is in this work of education and health care that NGOs and other projects can effectively support people living with HIV/AIDS. In Mae Sai, there is no home as yet which specifically supports persons with HIV/AIDS. Baan Doi has moved in to fill this void.

Our Vision and Goals

The vision of Baan Doi is to decrease discrimination and the stereotyping of those living with HIV/AIDS. Our goals are to promote the prevention of HIV/AIDS and to raise awareness about HIV/AIDS within the community.

During the next few years, we will be accomplishing these aims by (1) providing a safe, nurturing environment in a home for children who are affected by HIV/AIDS from whatever causes, and (2) by providing educational materials to the local community about the transmission and prevention of HIV/AIDS.

Healthy family environment encourages children to keep physically fit and takes extra care of individual needs. Centre point of Baan Doi project is to help children pursue necessary education and prepare them for future independent and successful lives as responsible and conscious citizens.

² HIV and its transmission, July 1999, <http://www.cdc.gov/hiv/resources/factsheets/transmission.htm> (April 2008).

Our Target group

Baan Doi's children come from the Mae Sai area. They have either lost their parents because of AIDS, or they themselves are infected with HIV and have no responsible caretaker.

Our on-site buildings provide living and growing space for 12 children. Our off-site resources help children either in their own homes or by a combination of care in their homes and at Baan Doi.

How we work

Family

Children affected by HIV/AIDS find in Baan Doi a new home in a familial environment. We are a small team where the work of parenting is shared.

Health

In cooperation with Mae Sai and Chiang Rai Hospital, our children receive medical care (ARV treatment) together with the knowledge they need about their care. We focus on alternative healing methods including healthy nutrition to help strengthen the children's immune systems, and to decrease the side effects of the medicine.

Education

Children in Baan Doi have the possibility of attending school and/or special-tuition classes according to their needs. In addition to regular schooling, our children receive preschool education as well as educational support at home. Our children can take part in activities which promote good health and well-being such as music, dance, yoga, meditation, and sports. They also help take care of the home-and-center's animals and tend the vegetable and flower garden.

3 – Set-up and trial of the HIV-positive natural healing project in Baan Doi

Although the above description of the Baan Doi orphanage describes a medical programme closely coordinated with the local hospitals and the conventional drug system, the owner of this orphanage believes in, and hopes for a more natural system whereby the children can regain perfect health without the consumption of the ARV drugs. This desire is in keeping with the methods and concepts of my project.

3.1 - Planning

The first stage of the plan is relatively simple. The required space to set up production of the wheatgrass, EM and Kombucha is all that is required. At present, space is limited to the buildings within which the children sleep and eat yet it has been decided that somehow room will be made for the production of these medicines.

For a short time this will be sufficient for the number of children presently staying in Baan Doi is now only six. As the numbers increase and the children from the surrounding areas are brought in for treatment, another building will become absolutely necessary. This building will require an area for production of the medicines, rooms for treatment, the space for an office and administration. Later space will be needed for training classrooms.

3.2 – Budget for 6 months

Basic needs

Air ticket from New Zealand to Thailand return	US$	1400
Wheat Grass Juicer	US$	400
Six months supply of wheat seeds (approximately 60kilos)	US$	200
Sodium chlorite for MMS production	US$	200
Citric Acid for MMS production	US$	80
EM micro organisms as a probiotic for rebuilding intestinal flora	UD$	250
Kombucha as a probiotic for rebuilding intestinal flora	UD$	250
Salary for Thai person to be trained as natural doctor
For 6 months	US$	1400
Two more Thai trainees	US$	2800

As mentioned before, this initial budget does not include a building to be used to carry out the treatments and the necessary beds, furniture etc needed to fit out a clinic to which the AIDS sufferers can come for treatment. However, his budget does however provide enough funds to test the functionality of this proposed project. My own costs of operating within the project are also not included. To facilitate the work I would need the use of a small motorcycle for transportation and other numerous expenses involved with running the operation. The costs of hospital tests for the people with HIV are also expensive but need to be undertaken to monitor the progress in their return to health. These have not been included

4- Progress at this point of time (19 Oct 2010)

Piaporn Seehuang

In May 2009 the orphanage was informed about a young girl called Piaporn Seehuang. She was HIV positive and very sick with a CD 4 white blood cell count of 135 which is an indication of very weak immune system.

After the hospital test in September 2010 I tested her using my kinesiology system. She showed a strong immune system together with a small presence of HIV and other viral infections.

I treated her with Brain re-patterning for the viral infections and a small amount of Spirulina. Within a week I could not find any traces of the HIV or other viruses in the body.

After my treatment she had an HIV antibody test but it still showed positive. I retested with the kinesiology and again found no sign of the HIV or viruses. I tested for HIV antibodies and found a strong presence.

These results indicated to me that some important questions need to be asked about THE HOSPITAL'S CONCEPT THAT A POSITIVE ANTIBODY TEST AUTOMATICALLY MEAN ONE STILL HAS AIDS.

I reread Jim Humbles book 'Breakthrough' focusing on his treatment of AIDS sufferers in Africa. There are numerous reports of the clients being seriously sick then regaining health after the MMS treatment. Months later they could return to full employment with no loss of health from that time on. The test results showed remarkable CD 4 white blood cell count readings indicating the immune system had recovered. I could find no reports in his book on the HIV antibody tests becoming negative.

I decided to write to Jim Humble and get his opinion. The following pages contain his answers and my questions.

Conversation: Success stories and Question

Brian,

Your suspicions are quite correct. There are no medical tests to prove the absence of HIV. There never will be. The antibodies are always left as that is the job of the immune system, to create Antibodies. Do you see? The test is for antibodies. The antibodies will always be present. Once the system creates antibodies it always creates them just in case the disease returns. I treated successfully, 800 HIV cases in Malawi earlier this year. There were 40 cases of cancer, 50 cases of numb legs and feet, 5 heart diseases, many malaria cases that wouldn't go away, Hep C cases, and about 20 other diseases in the 800 HIV cases. 99% were well, with energy, feeling good, back to work but you can't prove it.

The Anti Viral Drugs (ARV 's) will eventually kill that little girl. Do you see? The Drug companies are winning even with MMS as the doctors will not stop giving the people ARV's and that will kill them. Your little girl is feeling good only because the HIV is gone and the MMS is cancelling out the ARV's. But when she stops taking the MMS but continues the ARV's she will soon be feeling bad again as no one can take the ARV 's and still feel well for very long. We have got to stop them from giving ARV's.

Try this: Get the box in which the bottle of ARV's is packaged and get the paper telling about the testing of the ARV's out of the box. Read it to the lady running the Orphanage. It will tell of people dying during the testing of the ARV in that bottle plus it will tell of more than 50 diseases that were contracted by the people on the testing procedure. If she has any brains at all, she will see that it isn't good for that girl or any of the others.

Actually, they never proved that there is an HIV virus. They have proved that where it was supposed to have been proven that a HIV virus exists, that it never was really proved.

Good Luck

As always with love,

Jim Humble

Hello Jim Humble

My name is Brian Dodds and I am at the moment in northern Thailand at an orphanage attempting to apply my own systems, together with your MMS to help child AIDS sufferers in this area. I have not worked with many, but already I have some questions you may be able to help me. One of the children infected with AIDS was quite weak and recovered very well with a combination of Thai natural herbs, spirulina, your MMS, my own brain re-patterning system (which is a type of Rife type frequency method yet the frequencies are produced by the brain) and good nutritional food. The CD 4 white blood cell count returned to normal, in fact pretty much everything was normal but she still shows a positive HIV antibody test. Because of the positive reading, the lady running the orphanage feels obliged to continue the anti-viral drugs. In your book I can find reports of AIDS recovery, evidence of white blood cell count increases but no reports of negative HIV antibody results.

I am wondering if you do have reports of negative HIV test results in your experience with MMS and also wondering how important this test is.

Thank you so much for your perseverance in your research to bring these methods to the people.

I contacted Didi Ananda Ruchira of the 'Ananda Marga' yoga organization who has a AIDS treatment centre in Kenya, Africa (www.abhalight.org). She works with AIDS sufferers who have no access to western medicine. Her main treatment is homeopathics and she claims her clients return to health and active work. I asked her about understanding about the relationship between HIV positive results and the health progress her clients.

Hello Brian

You ask a good question and I don't have an answer. I treat a lot of people with HIV, yet don't have the facilities to track them very well to give you a definitive answer.

As far as it goes, I agree with you. There is no need to remain on ARV's, and more especially if the CD4 count is high. However one couldn't consider them truly cured however until you track them for about 1 year or more and retest.

I think tho your main problem is that the Thai gov't policy forces people on ARV's? So your dilemma is more legal than medical. As the fact that you are treating orphans, you could be letting yourself into a huge scandal and legal complications if you try to take them off ARVs. The allopathic doctors will oppose you all the way.

Since ARV's can, themselves, produce so many aids-like side effects it's hard to tell what's going on in the body sometimes.

You can make your own homeopathic detox from ARV's by taking one of the pills, dissolving it, then preparing it as a homeopathic remedy as a 12x. Then you feed that back to the patients. It will go far to remove sideeffects of the drugs. If you need more instructions how to make a homeopathic remedy I'll write you again.

also there's another homeopathic medicine excellent for HIV and you can see it at www.aidsremedyfund.org <<http://www.aidsremedyfund.org/>> . If you choose to use it, I can send you as much as you need.

Please see my own books at www.abhalight.org/download <<http://www.abhalight.org/download>> and download GREAT HEALTH NATURALLY - 1 and 2. I hope it'll be useful to you too.

Thanks for your book. I will go through it.

To look deeper into this question of hospital AIDS testing lets look at the medical principle of vaccination.

My understanding of that medical protocol is that an inoculation is given against a certain disease and the body will produce antibodies. Those antibodies, after the required number of vaccinations are given, remain in the body to protect the person from any threat of that disease. This means that the person is perfectly healthy but has antibodies of a certain disease for protection. If I apply that understanding to the AIDS question, then my conclusion is that anybody who has ever showed a positive HIV reading will continue to have the antibodies in their system whether they are still infected with the actual AIDS viruses or not. I spoke to another person who had spent time in Africa working with AIDS sufferers. She knew of cases where children, who were treated naturally and had recovered, would remain HIV positive for up to ten years. After that, it seemed that their bodies felt there was no longer any threat and ceased to produce the antibodies thus finally gaining a negative HIV result.

My conclusion

The HIV antibody test is not always an indication of whether the person has AIDS or not.

The HIV antibody test is only an indication that either:

- 1) The person has HIV/AIDS and the body is combating the virus with antibodies.
- 2) The person has recovered from HIV/AIDS but there are still HIV antibodies being produced to protect against any reinfection.

or

How do we know somebody has recovered from AIDS?

- 1) The best indication is when the CD 4 white blood cell count has returned to normal.
- 2) The person is happily back at work for a year or two in good health.

Apart from systems like kinesiology, I know of no direct test to ascertain whether there are any actual AIDS related viruses still active in the body.

If the medical system promotes the idea that the HIV negative result is the only indication of a recovery from AIDS, then to my mind, the world is encouraged to believe no cure is possible. This leads and the continuation of the anti-viral drugs no matter what the situation. Long term use of these very strong drugs with their side-effects inevitably take their toll upon the on the immune system and full recovery is very rare. From a business /moneymaking point of view, this protocol is perfect.

Present situation
